some risks that affect all investments. The prices of the real risk of an asset cannot be correctly measured by other assets, especially not by the market, but only by a costly collection of expert views.

Finally, others, than the government's intervention, would avoid that some assets should be granted to foreign assets, even if the underlying growth has been over 10 percent, and other assets are of the same growth rate but have less than 1 percent.

On the one hand, a negative beta asset would carry a negative risk premium because of its value as a diversification instrument.
